NEW JAIL TO CONTRACT FOR FOOD SERVICES, HEALTHCARE

BY BOB DEMAREE

With the county jail moving into the new Jefferson County Sheriff's Office and Criminal Justice Center later this year, transitions are taking place with a new food service and new healthcare company approved at Thursday's County Commissioners meeting.

The requests were made by County Sheriff Ben Flint to hire Kellwell Food Management for the food services and Quality Correctional Care for the healthcare at the new jail facility.

Flint noted that with Kellwell, the pay scale is set up "so the more inmates we have the cheaper it gets per meal" which should be a benefit once the new 300-bed, 84,779-square-foot facility opens later this year. "In the long run, it will be more cost effective with the Kellwell company," he said.

Additionally, Flint said that Kellwell, based in Beattyville, Kentucky, has pledged that if there's anything ordered and not received, "they'll make it right and drive it up here." The company will hire locally for its kitchen staff, he said.

Meanwhile, Quality Correctional Care will provide 24-hour care that will rely more on paramedics than nurses. Flint thinks the company's representatives

Ivy Tech Madison held a ribbon-cutting and unveiled its new Paramedic Science Lab facility Thursday, a setup that will provide emergecny medical technician and paramedic students hands-on training in situations that related to real world scenarios. Participating in the opening are (from left) — Amanda Harsin, Ivy Tech Madison chancellor; Shane Williams, paramedic instructor at Ivy Tech Madison; Kraig Kinney, state EMS director with the Indiana Department of Homeland Security; Annabet Garner, Troy Alvey, Molly Dodge, Carol Dozier, Ivy Tech board chair and CEO of Norton King's Daughters' Health; Carmen Elliot, program chair of Paramedic Science; and Cary Strouse, vice president of human resources and strategic operation at Ivy Tech Madison.

Ivy Tech Madison unveils new Paramedic Lab

Hands-on facility will train first responders

BY BOB DEMAREE

A new Paramedic Science lab space was introduced Thursday with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at Ivy Tech Community College Madison, a facility that will allow prospective EMTs and paramedics to practice hands-on training in real-life situations.

The new lab includes a simulated apartment and ambulance simulator adjacent to a versatile training classroom.

Molly Dodge, Ivy Tech's senior vice president of workforce and careers and a former chancellor at Ivy Tech Madison, said the simulated spaces will educate and train Ivy Tech students into scenarios "where medics may need to provide care which helps prepare our graduates to be workforce ready on day one."

Carol Dozier, executive CEO at Norton King's Daughters' Health in Madison, noted there is currently a nationwide crisis with emergency medical services and the need for paramedics is being unmet.

"There is a dire need for paramedics. Last year, the American Ambulance Association said that 55% of the part-time paramedic jobs were unfilled, and that is only going to go up as we have an aging population," Dozier said. "So, we need these paramedics and EMTs in our community. This new state-of-the-art facility, along with the wonderful faculty and staff on this campus, will help to provide qualified candidates for our future that will save lives in our communities."

Bob Demaree

"We are excited to provide a space worthy of the profession … for many years, our program has not necessarily been built around state-of-the-art facilities but on the dedication of the program directors, instructors and students. We have trained here for years without any facilities and operated out of equipment closets." Ivy Tech Madison Chancellor Amanda Harsin

Amanda Harsin, current chancellor of Ivy Tech Madison, said the new facility will continue and expand on Ivy Tech Madison's long involvement in training paramedics for parts of five decades.

"We are excited to provide a space worthy of the profession," Harsin said, noting that while paramedics have trained at Ivy Tech Madison since 1985 "for many years, our program has not necessarily been built around state-of-the-art facilities but on the dedication of the program directors, instructors and students. We have trained here for years without any facilities and operated out of equipment closets."

Harsin said plans for the new lab began two years ago and the process has moved quickly from idea to implementation.

"From funding to architects to remodel, it's happened pretty fast," she said, noting the transformation of under-utilized small classrooms and offices into the paramedic lab complex.

Carmen Elliot, program chair of Paramedic Science at Ivy Tech Madison, said the new lab space will better prepare students to become EMTs and paramedics. "We've always had people coming here but now we hope we're able to serve even more students."

During the ceremony special recognition was given to Hugh Garner, who Harsin said served "as one of the founders and pillars of this program."

Garner, who died Jan. 21, 2022, worked in the field as an EMS and paramedic for just short of 50 years. He developed the first EMT course at Ivy Tech in 1985 and continued to serve part-time as a course coordinator or instructor in all levels of EMS courses. In 2005, Garner was named Paramedic of the Year by the Indiana EMS Commission. In 2022, Garner was the first person to be awarded the Emeritus Award and the State EMS Director's Award by the Indiana State EMS Office.

Data giving city clearer picture of tourism, event attendance

BY BOB DEMAREE

Over the years massive crowds have descended on Madison for its annual two-day Madison Chautauqua Festival of the Arts but with no tickets or admission there was never a good way to know how just many the event had drawn and from where they traveled.

But now, thanks to a data gathered service called by Placer.ai that the city of Madison subscribes too with support from the county, organizers have a better understanding on not only crowd size, but where the people came from and how long the stayed.

The city has been utilizing Placer.ai data since August — a system that pulls its information from the cell phones that juts about everybody is carrying.

Tony Steinhardt III, who worked at RATIO Architects for 25 years before returning to his hometown to become the Madison's director of economic development, said that from his previous work he knew "there were data sources that we needed to have access to, and to find the right one that gives us the right balance between economic development and tourism, and basic community needs."

JCDWC seeks to revive local club

BY BOB DEMAREE

The Jefferson County Democratic Women's Club (JCDWC) has announced a membership drive in an effort to revive that organization.

Treva Shelton

John Hutchinson, chair of the party, recently met with Treva Shelton seeking her interest in leading an effort to revive the club. Shelton accepted the position with the challenge of recruiting members, developing programs and making changes to reactivate the organization

The organization, which last met three years ago, will also see to create a more inclusive name for the club.

Shelton, an elected member of Hanover Town Council, will lead the club with assistance from Cami Keltch, Julie Patterson and Jennifer Scott.

"The reestablishment of this group is a positive step towards promoting civic engagement and can inspire more women to become politically active," said Dan Dattilo, a Madison City Councilman at large who is the only elected Democrat in the city of Madison and is vacating that seat to run for mayor. "By coming together, they can work towards a more equitable society, where every voice is heard and every person is valued. I look forward to seeing the impact this group will have on our community."

North Vernon man arrested in theft, burglary at Buy/Sell/Trade

BY THE COURIER STAFF

A Jennings County man is facing felony charges in connection with the alleged theft of money and checks from a downtown Madison business on or before Feb. 24, 2023.

Justin Elmer Spaulding

Madison Police Patrolman Trent Smith responded to the Buy/Sell/Trade, 303 West Main Street, Madison, on Feb. 24 to investigate the possible theft of money and checks from the business.

During that investigation, Smith developed a suspect in the alleged crime identified as Justin Elmer Spaulding, 29, of North Vernon, Indiana.

On March 1, Smith and MPD Patrolman Cameron Blankenship, along with Jennings County Sheriff's Deputies, executed a search warrant at Spaulding's North Vernon residence. As a result of their follow-up investigation, the officers developed probable cause to arrest Spaulding for Burglary, a Level 5 felony, and Theft, a Level 6 felony. The burglary charge stems from Spaulding entering a secured area of the store not open to the public.

Spaulding was arrested in North Vernon and transported to Madison where he was lodged in the Jefferson County Jail without bond.

Spaulding was arraigned in Jefferson Superior Court on March 3, where a not guilty charged was entered in his behalf and bond was set at $10,000 cash.

A pretrial conference in the case has been scheduled for 1 p.m. on April 4 and a jury trial at 9 a.m. on May 16.

Shed fire results in total loss of structure

Bob Demaree

Madison Fire Department was dispatched to a shed fire in the north side of 1200 block of West Main Street on Wednesday. Firefighters arrived to find a fully engulfed structure and quickly extinguished the blaze. However, the building was a total loss. There were no injuries.

made a valid point by noting that "a lot of your paramedics have seen more trauma and done more hands-on, in-the-field care" than nurses, which could be beneficial during the evening hours when the jail intake often sees inmates arriving at the jail from distressing situations.

Flint estimated that Quality Correctional Care, based in Muncie, provides healthcare for 85% of the jails in the state.

Another benefit of Quality Correctional Care is that the agreement includes the company assisting with establishing a Jail Chemical Addiction Program (JCAP) in the new facility. "They will provide a trained, licensed, clinician to help us get that up and running," said Flint, and continue to run the program it wanted.

The company will also provide 24-hour mental health coverage, said Flint, noting the jail currently receives only four hours per week of mental health coverage. Quality Correctional Care also has its own pharmacy and, with a pharmacy room included in the design of the new jail, Flint noted "we'll be able to keep our own meds on site so that will cut down on the cost of shipping meds back and forth."

In other business:

• County Highway Superintendent Bobby Phillips said bids will be advertised for road alignment and paving of the bridge structure on Brushy Fork Road at the intersection of Tate Ridge Road. The bridge was damaged in the heavy flooding during Labor Day weekend 2022 that impacted the Brushy Fork area in Jefferson County, along with northern Switzerland County and parts of Ohio County.

Federal disaster relief was denied, and while a request remains for Indiana state disaster relief, Phillips said that for safety reasons the county is moving ahead with the plans to repair the structure with hopes if relief funding is approved the county can be reimbursed. The bids will be opened at 9 a.m. on Wednesday, March 22.

Also, a preconstruction meeting was held Thursday for a bridge replacement on County Road 325E that's between State Road 250 and Copeland Ridge near Canaan. Work is slated to begin next week with that bridge being closed until the project is complete.

• Approved a contract with Southern Indiana Regional Planning Commission (SIRPC) for $25,000 to administer a $250,000 Owner Occupation Rehabilitation grant to the county from the Indiana Office of Community and Rural Affairs to directly fund homeowners of low-moderate income to make needed repairs on 18 homes in Jefferson County. The administrative costs are being paid out of that grant. Patty Jackson, deputy director of SIRPC, said applications have already been submitted, and so far five have been approved.

• Michael Hicks, the community coordinator involved in the needs assessment on a residential treatment facility, gave an update on the process. He said the needs assessment is currently underway with anticipation that a final report will come in June.

• Jefferson County has two appointments on the city of Madison's plan commission — representing the city's buffer zone in Jefferson County — and the Commissioners appointed Rick Farris and Zac Laughlin to terms that end in December 2026. Farris also currently serves on the city's Board of Zoning Appeals.

• Approved County Surveyor Mike Pittman as the county's American Disabilities Act Coordinator, replacing Josh Cline, the county's building and zoning inspector. Pittman stated that Cline's workload has increased in dealing with nuisance issues throughout the county while also performing his inspector duties.

• Approved a three-year $15,000 contract with Dossett Consulting ($5,000 per year) which claims the county's indirect cost of child support in which the fee is reimbursed at 66%. In 2021, the county received $18,000 back on the reimbursement. "It definitely pays for itself," said County Auditor Heather Huff.

• All of Indiana's child support fees are being switched to a new software platform, requiring County Clerk's offices to reconcile amounts. Huff said it's a matter impacting county clerk offices throughout Indiana as they struggle with noncollectable accounts.

"There has never been a policy to write them off," said Huff, but now a policy to do that is being created by the State of Indiana. In following requirements by the State Board of Accounts, Commissioners approved policies that allow the county to make the necessary reconciliations. In Jefferson County, Huff said the reconciliations amount to slightly less than $3,000 and have been an issue for more than 20 years

• County resident Richard Carter, who has been advocating for the Commissioners to enact a second amendment preservation ordinance, told Commissioners he is letting them "off the hook after three or four years" because House Bill 1117 that is currently progressing through the Indiana General Assembly provides second amendment protections.

"Go to your governor and your state representatives to expedite" passage of that legislation "because that basically covers all the groundwork we need now," Carter said. "It would take care what I've been trying to get done here in Jefferson County."

• Commissioner David Bramer issued a reminder that a public hearing on the updated Jefferson County Unified Development Ordinance will be held at 6 p.m. on Tuesday at the Ivy Tech Madison building on Madison's hilltop.

Child Development Center helping both children, moms

BY JENNIFER WILLHOITE
CARROLL COUNTY SCHOOLS

Becoming a mom at a young age is tough. You feel overwhelmed by the idea of taking care of a newborn baby and doing all the adult things that are required to care for a family.

But there is an untapped resource in the Carroll County community that can help through pregnancy and early childhood education. The program helps not only the children, but the parents as well.

The Carroll County Child Development Center is that untapped resource.

The federally-funded program is open to the public and though some services are based on income, others are based on a child's need or developmental issues. They even offer a home-based service where home-based teachers come to you and help you prepare for having a child and educating the child.

Darian Skirvin, Dailee Johnson, Madi Carli and Ashley Morris are a few moms who enrolled their children in Early Head Start and discovered a career pathway in the process. Not only does Head Start help prepare children for kindergarten, it can also help adults get an education and become Head Start teachers.

The four women have all completed their Child Development Associate (CDA) credential that allows them to be Early Head Start (birth to 3-year-old) teachers. Once that's complete, they can obtain an associate's degree and become a Head Start teacher.

The best part is their education is gained at no cost to them. Head Start pays for the entire process.

"I have watched all of them grow professionally," said Leah Spencer, director of the program. "They have all grown so much and grown as moms, too. That's what Head Start is all about."

Morris was just 19 when she had her son. She was in a difficult relationship, which ultimately ended. "I felt like I was really doing it all on my own," she said. Then she found Head Start.

She applied for a job and she and her son both started the program at the same time. "I've grown so much since I've been here," she said. "It was like this job was the job I never knew I needed, but I really needed it."

Her little boy, who is now 6 years old and flourishing in kindergarten, has been through a lot but Morris said the leg-up he received from Head Start and all of its services has made a lasting difference in his young life. It's done the same for her. She now owns her own home and has obtained her CDA to become an Early Head Start teacher.

Ashley Morris (center, pictured working with Head Start children) and her son, now 6 years old, have both flourished in the Carroll County Child Development Center.

It's clear the toddlers in her room adore her and she adores them. They learn and teach through playing. Morris is at home with two or three children in her lap while teaching colors, numbers and motor skills.

Madi Carli has a similar story. "I've always had a calling of sorts to work with kids," she said, noting she learned about Head Start because her mom and the director are friends. She began on the Head Start side but decided she wanted a little less chaos and a little more toddler so she moved to the Early Head Start, where she's now a lead teacher in the 2- and 3-year-old room.

"It's a very good opportunity. It's good for first-time moms who want to work here and put your child in here," said Carli, who had her baby in 2021. "You can put your child in here and it makes you feel safe. We have so many opportunities to help young mothers."

Her daughter has learned social emotional skills such as sharing and sitting at the table to learning to connect with other adults and children.

"It feels like a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," Carli said. "This place is amazing for kids."

Johnson and Skirvin echoed their co-workers sentiments.

Johnson was just 18 years old when she took her job at Head Start. She completed her CDA in 2018 and got got pregnant shortly afterward. She said it was a "little hard" to continue college coursework, have a newborn and work, but because of the environment at Head Start she was able to do it all.

Skirvin is the only one of the four who attended Head Start as a little girl. She has come full circle as she now has her CDA and is a lead teacher in the 1- and 2-year-old room.

She followed the typical school program — graduated from high school and got a college degree — but it wasn't quite right for her. She came home and gave birth to her daughter in 2019. Since then, she's had two more babies. She said it's a full plate for sure, but Head Start's flexibility has made it possible for her to continue working on her associate's degree in early childhood education and work full-time.

"It's definitely a learning experience being young and trying to figure out what I wanted to do," Skirvin said. "Everyone here is willing to help. I would highly encourage any parents who are thinking about it to apply."

All four teachers said they share the opportunities with people whenever they can, but they still wish more were aware of the offerings.

"No matter where you come from it's always possible for you to do anything," said Skirvin, who noted that drugs and alcohol consumed her parents. "You can get out of that loop. There are people here to help you."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Saturday, March 4, the 63rd day of 2023. There are 302 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 4, 1933, Franklin D. Roosevelt took office as America's 32nd president.

On this date:

In 1789, the Constitution of the United States went into effect as the first Federal Congress met in New York. (The lawmakers then adjourned for lack of a quorum.)

In 1865, President Abraham Lincoln was inaugurated for a second term of office; with the end of the Civil War in sight, Lincoln declared: "With malice toward none, with charity for all."

In 1917, Republican Jeannette Rankin of Montana took her seat as the first woman elected to the U.S. House of Representatives, the same day President Woodrow Wilson took his oath of office for a second term (it being a Sunday, a private ceremony was held inside the U.S. Capitol; a second, public swearing-in took place the next day).

In 1966, John Lennon of The Beatles was quoted in the London Evening Standard as saying, "We're more popular than Jesus now," a comment that caused an angry backlash in the United States.

In 1981, a jury in Salt Lake City convicted Joseph Paul Franklin, an avowed racist and serial killer, of violating the civil rights of two Black men, Ted Fields and David Martin, who'd been shot to death. (Franklin received two life sentences for this crime; he was executed in 2013 for the 1977 murder of a Jewish man, Gerald Gordon.)

In 1987, President Ronald Reagan addressed the nation on the Iran-Contra affair, acknowledging that his overtures to Iran had "deteriorated" into an arms-for-hostages deal.

In 1994, in New York, four extremists were convicted of the 1993 World Trade Center bombing that killed six people and injured more than a thousand.

In 1998, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that sexual harassment at work can be illegal even when the offender and victim are of the same gender.

In 2015, the Justice Department cleared Darren Wilson, a white former Ferguson, Missouri, police officer, in the fatal shooting of Michael Brown, a Black 18-year-old, but also issued a scathing report calling for sweeping changes in city law enforcement practices.

In 2018, former Russian spy Sergei Skripal and his daughter were found unconscious on a bench in the southwestern English city of Salisbury; both survived what British authorities said was a murder attempt using a nerve agent.

In 2020, federal health officials investigated a suburban Seattle nursing home at the center of a coronavirus outbreak.

Ten years ago: Cardinals from around the world gathered inside the Vatican for their first round of meetings before the conclave to elect the next pope, following the retirement of Benedict XVI.

Five years ago: "The Shape of Water" won four Oscars including best picture; the top prize was announced by Warren Beatty and Faye Dunaway a year after they were caught up in the erroneous announcement that "La La Land" and not "Moonlight" had won for best picture.

One year ago: Russian troops seized the biggest nuclear power plant in Europe after a middle-of-the-night attack that set it on fire and briefly raised worldwide fears of a catastrophe in the most chilling turn in Moscow's invasion of Ukraine to that point.

Today's birthdays: Actor Paula Prentiss is 85. Movie director Adrian Lyne is 82. Singer Shakin' Stevens is 75. Author James Ellroy is 75. Former Energy Secretary Rick Perry is 73. On this date:

In 1834, the city of York in Upper Canada was incorporated as Toronto.

In 1836, the Alamo in San Antonio, Texas, fell as Mexican forces led by General Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna stormed the fortress after a 13-day siege; the battle claimed the lives of all the Texan defenders, nearly 200 strong, including William Travis, James Bowie and Davy Crockett.

In 1857, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Dred Scott v. Sandford, ruled 7-2 that Scott, a slave, was not an American citizen and therefore could not sue for his freedom in federal court.

In 1912, Oreo sandwich cookies were first introduced by the National Biscuit Co.

In 1933, a national bank holiday declared by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, aimed at calming panicked depositors, went into effect.

In 1964, heavyweight boxing champion Cassius Clay officially changed his name to Muhammad Ali.

In 1970, a bomb being built inside a Greenwich Village townhouse in New York by the radical Weathermen accidentally went off, destroying the house and killing three group members.

In 2002, Independent Counsel Robert Ray issued his final report in which he wrote that former President Bill Clinton could have been indicted and probably would have been convicted in the scandal involving former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

In 2016, former first lady Nancy Reagan died in Los Angeles at age 94.

Ten years ago: Sen. Rand Paul, R-Ky., a critic of the Obama administration's drone policy, launched an old-style filibuster to block Senate confirmation of John Brennan's nomination to be CIA director; Paul lasted nearly 13 hours before yielding the floor.

Five years ago: Top economic adviser Gary Cohn announced that he was leaving the White House after breaking with President Donald Trump on trade policy. Nashville Mayor Megan Barry, a one-time rising star in the Democratic Party, resigned after pleading guilty to cheating the city out of thousands of dollars to carry on an affair with her bodyguard.

One year ago: A second attempt to evacuate Ukrainians from the besieged city of Mariupol collapsed as Russian attacks made it impossible to create a humanitarian corridor, according to a Ukrainian official. In his first public remarks since resigning over multiple sexual harassment allegations, former New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo assailed the "cancel culture" he says was behind politically motivated efforts to remove him.

Today's birthdays: Former FBI and CIA director William Webster is 99. Former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan is 97. Dancer-actor Carmen de Lavallade is 92. LAB

A tree dedication was held in Garner's honor, and presented to wife, Annabet Garner, a retired faculty member at Ivy Tech Madison herself, who said the training classroom and lab space at Madison was a dream of Hugh's. She expressed appreciation to those "who carried that torch" in making it happen. "Hugh didn't want it for himself, he wanted it for you. He wanted it for his community."

Madison Mayor Bob Courtney attended the dedication and noted afterwards how important the program is to Madison and surrounding communities not only as a educator of future first responders but a way for local residents to seek the training needed to embark on high value careers.

"Ivy Tech's investment is another great example of education in action," he said. "This is another pathway to the workforce for a high demand career that's critical for our community."

DATA

"You have to have the data to sell the community. For us, it was really important to make that investment," said Steinhardt.

The data provides the statistics that the city can then use to convince businesses and industries to locate in Madison. "It allows us to sell them on Madison as being a community that meets their criteria for locating here," Steinhardt said.

The data is also beneficial for tourism — perhaps Madison's biggest industry — and that's why the city now shares that the information with Visit Madison Inc.

"Placer gives Visit Madison Inc a great opportunity to know even more about our visitor than ever before, which ensures our marketing, promotions, and activities can be directed in the most impactful way," said Andrew Forrester, VMI executive director.

Forrester noted VMI has a few tools to measure visitation such as the innkeepers tax, which tracks overnight stays, and wristband/ticket sales that measure attendance at paid events. But the drawback is those tools could not measure an event that does not require an entry ticket — like the popular Chautauqua or Soup Stew Chili and Brew — or help understand how many people come to Madison on a day trip just to explore Main Street, the riverfront or Clifty Falls State Park. "With Placer data, we can see how many unique visitors came to Madison during a certain time period or during a specific event or festival," Forrester said.

Steinhardt said Placer.ai data provides specific details for all of that such as Madison had 365,000 visitors last year to the historic district and 37,500 visitors at the Chautauqua, which included 7,800 traveling more than 50 miles away. There were also 19,600 visitors in the downtown Madison historic district during the Madison Ribberfest BBQ & Blues Festival, a ticketed event that often spills over into Madison's already active music scene.

The data also provided that the heaviest car count during Chautauqua was at Cragmont and West Main streets where 8,182 cars passed through that intersection Chautauqua weekend. That data, Steinhardt said, also helps the city to know where police officers are most needed to help with traffic flow during the Chautauqua, and that takes advantage of the public safety component to the data.

Steinhardt said Placer.ai also provides real time data captured from geofencing cell phones that compiles information that includes age, vocation, household income and more.

"It tells you everything about the person" within a defined zone, Steinhardt said. "We don't know the exact name or exact address," he said, but it provides the statistical data.

Being able to see and analyze demographic information that tells where people come from, the type of income they have and how long they stay, helps VMI "to fine-tune our marketing and understand what is working to draw people and what isn't, as well as areas of potential growth," said Forrester.

Forrester said Placer.ai also provides information about potential tie-ins. "For example, we found that a small but significant number of Chautauqua visitors either began their visit or ended their visit with a stop at Hanover College," he said. "That is valuable to Madison and Hanover to know and perhaps make connections that would benefit both the college and the community."

Steinhardt said of all the data sources that are available, "Placer.ai seemed to be the sweet spot for us. It has a good balance of economic development and tourism," he said. "Now, we have the most accurate data we've ever had."

The Best Practices Used to Create Sustainable Streams of Retirement Income

"Layin' it on the line"

By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/
Wealth Management

Our parents and grandparents both taught us that making mistakes was part of life.

Some mistakes are easier to recover from than others. But when it comes to money and time, the closer you are to retirement, the less time you have to recover from bad money moves. My advice is not to take any chances you can't afford. As you near retirement, you'll need to spend more time creating an investment approach that aligns each account to its specific goal for cash flow requirements during retirement. The worst times for your investment portfolio to take a hit are somewhere in the five years before and five years after you retire. Some have called this the red retirement zone. Lose money in this segment, and it will significantly impact how you spend and withdraw money throughout your retirement years.

Here's a new retirement approach. It's not about being rich; it's about having the income needed to have peace of mind. We may never tire of discussing lessons from The Great Recession, which hit two groups especially hard--teens who saw their parents lose a home or job, and boomers who saw their savings depleted precisely at the wrong moment in life. So proper financial planning for retirement is crucial to your success. Boomers need to learn that they are leaving the accumulation phase of their life and now will be focusing on asset protection, sustainable income, and distribution of their assets over the next 30+ years.

Many people are in this category express extreme insecurity regarding the reality of ever retiring and having a sufficient income stream during their retirement years. So what can Worry-Free retirement income solutions offer you? Our planning provides a retirement income trifecta.

First is a guaranteed sustainable way to maintain income in retirement.

Second, are potentially higher income payments than you can achieve anywhere else.

A third is a reduction of some of the market risk from your overall portfolio before and during the years of your retirement when you can't afford to endure the consequences of a market downturn. It may be true that money can't buy you love, but it can buy happiness in retirement, as sufficient amounts of guaranteed income equal a happy retirement.

Planning with certainty is the new strategy for retirement income. For nearly two decades, financial advisors subscribed to the notion that their clients could spend 4% annually of their accumulated savings in retirement and not run out of money. No more. Between market volatility, inflation, volatile interest rates and an uncertain economy, advisors are questioning the traditional approaches to retirement income. Of course, what you consider an uncertain economic environment depends on who is reporting the news and what day it is. But it doesn't matter if you're properly planned.

Simply put, today's retirement portfolios demand a smarter balance of growth and safety to effectively achieve a stream of lifetime income. The good news is that the answers to the challenge are emerging in the form of improved strategies that promise to generate more income at less cost and with less market risk.

Don't be like Scarlet O'Hara, who said, "I can't think of that right now. If I do, I go crazy. I'll think about it tomorrow."

It would be best if you thought about it today.

3A BOYS BASKETBALL SECTIONAL

NO QUARTER

Scottsburg shows little mercy in 69-35 win over Madison

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

CHARLESTOWN — The author Robert Burns once wrote that "The best laid of plans of mice and men often go awry." Mike Tyson had different way of voicing the same sentiment: "Everybody has a plan until they get punched in the mouth."

Regardless of which turn of phrase you prefer, both described Madison's brief stay in the IHSAA Class 3A Boys Basketball Sectional on Wednesday. Despite a careful defensive strategy, Madison's young Cubs were no match for No. 11 Scottsburg as the Warriors rolled to an easy 69-35 win in a game that lasted less than an hour.

Scottsburg shot 77% from the floor in the first half and did virtually anything it wanted, triggering a running clock early in the third quarter as the Warriors opened the sectional tournament in style.

There were several positives that Madison coach Adam Stotts could point to. He was pleased with the way his team opened the game and he was happy that they played virtually even with Scottsburg over the final 16 minutes. But Stotts is also a pragmatist and he knew that his squad of mostly sophomores were facing a massive uphill battle to even stay with the veteran Warriors.

"If you look at our roster, four of our five starters are sophomores and a freshman is one of our first guys off the bench. Many of the teams we play are all seniors," Stotts said. "You look at Jennings County a few years ago, heck look at Scottsburg two years ago, and they were in the same boat. It just takes time. I saw some guys in the locker room that were upset about the way this game went. They keep saying that they hate to lose. This summer is the time to prove that and begin working on getting better for next season."

Madison was run out of the gym by Scottsburg the last time the two teams played and Stotts knew that the only chance the Cubs had Wednesday was to do something drastic. To help counter the Warriors' fantastic outside shooting, the plan was to extend Madison's effective zone and deliberately slow the game down on offense.

David Campbell

Madison's Quincy Reynolds (12) shoots over Scottsburg's Jack Miller (11) during the Class 3A Sectional at Charlestown on Wednesday. Reynolds led Madison with 13 points but the Cubs saw their season come to an end 69-35 to the No. 11 Warriors.

The plan worked, briefly. Madison's first possession blew nearly a minute and a half off the clock and ended with a Landon True 3-pointer. After a defensive stop, Quincy Reynolds scored on a basket and the Cubs led 5-3.

But extending the zone proved to be easier said than done, especially for a young team that has spent most of the season playing defense a certain way. Scottsburg found a way to move the zone from side-to-side and by doing that found easy shots. And once the Warriors found their range, the snowball began rolling downhill picking up momentum.

"We made the adjustments but the guys have been playing the zone a certain way and once they got out there, they kind of forgot what our plan was and went back to what they had been doing," Stotts said. "I could hear people telling me call a timeout, and to do this and do that, but we had guys that were in their head and guys trying to pull themselves out. Guys were folding in the moment and it was

Hall-of-famer Stewart follows his heart

Former NASCAR driver starting full-time drag racing career

BY MARK LONG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Tony Stewart usually lets guys with families hit the runway first following NASCAR races. The Hall of Fame driver who's now a team owner and part-time television commentator figures it helps them get home and see their kids before bedtime.

It's a noble gesture, for sure — one he dumped on the tarmac this week.

"I'm getting to the airport first and getting out of there," Stewart said. "I got bigger fish to fry."

More accurate: a new career path to start.

The 51-year-old Stewart is embarking on his first season as a full-time NHRA driver, and he's all in. He will race a Top Alcohol dragster for McPhillips Racing when the season begins next week with the Gatornationals at Gainesville Raceway.

"I'm here; it's where my heart is," he said.

For Stewart, it's the latest — and arguably most challenging — lane change for a guy who's dedicated his life to motorsports. The three-time NASCAR champion also has titles in IndyCar and USAC as well as a fourth in NASCAR as co-owner at Stewart-Haas Racing. Most recently, he claimed the inaugural Superstar Racing Experience title, a summer stock car series he founded in 2021.

"Everything that I did in motorsports pretty much was all in the same bubble, even dirt-track racing, sports-car racing, NASCAR, IndyCar," Stewart said. "NHRA is off on its own island."

He calls it "Fantasy Island," not that surprising considering he met his wife, NHRA Top Fuel dragster Leah Pruett, at an event in 2020. They got engaged in March 2021 and were married later that year.

Now, Pruett is driving her second season for Tony Stewart Racing. Three-time Funny Car champion Matt Hagan also drives for TSR.

Stewart, though, is racing in a lower class. And he doesn't see himself moving up anytime soon, if at all.

"I'm not ready for it," he said. "I've driven a Top Fuel car 16 runs and every run I make in it, the more I realize that I am not ready to drive a Top Fuel dragster, and I don't belong in one right now.

"It's fine to test with it. But those cars are so fast that my brain is so far behind the car that if something happens, I don't know that I could catch it or be ready for it."

He has another reason to avoid making the jump.

"The last thing I want to do is have to race against my wife because I like my side of the bed every night," he quipped.

Stewart made his NHRA Top Alcohol debut in October at the Nevada Nationals, where he advanced to the finals and finished second by .0002 of a second. Stewart's 271.57 mph pass came up 1 inch short of the victory.

Madison Payne, a college student at Texas Christian University and a third-generation drag racer, edged Stewart in the quarter mile.

"It was good for the sport because Tony is such a big name," Payne said on racing podcast "Between The Slicks" in January. "But I was so happy I beat him. It would just be so messed up if anybody came into the sport and won their first race. No, it's not fair."

That one race weekend was enough to convince Stewart he wanted more. Now, he's running for a championship and will race 12 of 14 national events; he will miss

Purdue earns outright Big Ten championship

BY STEVE MEGARGEE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MADISON, Wis. — Zach Edey didn't want to know whether Purdue already had clinched the Big Ten outright regular-season title before the end of his team's game with Wisconsin.

Edey's coach couldn't resist finding out.

"I wish I could lie to you, but I asked," Purdue coach Matt Painter said after the fifth-ranked Boilermakers' 63-61 victory over Wisconsin on Thursday night. "I'm nosy that way."

Purdue (25-5, 14-5) had sealed the crown earlier in the evening by virtue of Illinois' 91-87 double-overtime victory over Michigan. That game concluded late in the first half of the Purdue-Wisconsin matchup.

But there was still plenty at stake in this game as Purdue sought to make its case for a No. 1 seed and Wisconsin (16-13, 8-11) attempted to boost its postseason credentials.

Edey also intended to make sure Purdue didn't back into this title, which explains why he didn't want anyone to tell him the Illinois-Michigan result.

"I wouldn't have wanted to win the Big Ten like that, so I was just trying to keep that out of my mind," said Edey, who had 17 points and 19 rebounds.

Neither team led by more than three points for the final 12 minutes. That made the loss that much tougher to take for Wisconsin, which has played in 21 of the last 22 NCAA Tournaments but may need to make a deep Big Ten Tournament run to get there this season.

In the eighth and final lead change of the second half, Edey made both ends of a one-and-one to put Purdue ahead 58-57 with 1:45 left. Edey had been 1 of 6 from the line before sinking those two.

Wisconsin's Chucky Hepburn missed a baseline jumper with 1:15 remaining, but Purdue's Ethan Morton misfired on a 3-pointer with 47 seconds remaining.

The Badgers called a timeout and got the ball to Max Klesmit, who missed a driving layup attempt as the Kohl Center crowd pleaded for a foul call.

"I was just trying to get to the rim, get in the paint and make a play," said Klesmit, who scored a season-high 19 points for a second straight game.

Purdue then stayed ahead and won for just the second time in five games by converting its free throws. Purdue went 9 of 10 on foul shots in the final 3:45 after going 2 of 8 up to that point.

Late basket lifts Vanderbilt over Kentucky

BY GARY B. GRAVES

LEXINGTON — Shots finally started falling again for Jordan Wright, whose boldest attempt came with the game on the line.

Wright hit a go-ahead fall-away jumper in the lane with 2.6 seconds remaining to finish with 23 points, and Vanderbilt topped No. 23 Kentucky 68-66 on Wednesday night for its first win at Rupp Arena since January 2007.

Jubilation followed for Vanderbilt and the senior reserve guard, who was eager to break out after a scoreless outing against Florida and just 15 points the previous three games. Some advice from Vandy coach Jerry Stackhouse helped.

"He said that (after) the last game, I could pick it up and that's what I did tonight," said Wright, who finished with a career high in points.

The surging Commodores (17-13, 10-7 Southeastern Conference) earned their seventh win in eight games and are 7-3 since losing to Kentucky 69-53 on Jan. 24 in Nashville. Their run has included a home upset of then-No. 6 Tennessee and a sweep of Florida, providing confidence to win a tense game in one of the sport's loudest environments and snapping a 14-game series drought.

Vanderbilt trailed 26-21 late in the first half before leading 34-30 at halftime and 46-35 early in the second before withstanding Kentucky's rally for a 66-64 advantage with 1:10 left on Oscar Tshiebwe's layup.

Wright answered with a drive from the right wing to tie the game with 42 seconds left, and Tyrin Lawrence grabbed Antonio Reeves' missed jumper with 20 seconds left. Vanderbilt let the clock run and Wright took a pass from near midcourt and dribbled to just inside the free-throw line, spun and fell back with the game winner.

Antonio Reeves' 3-point attempt missed the rim altogether as time expired. Kentucky had won its previous four and re-entered the rankings on Monday for the first time in seven weeks.

Tshiebwe finished with 21 points and 20 rebounds for the Wildcats (20-10, 11-6). Reeves added 14 points.

Wright made all four 3-point attempts and 8 of 12 overall for a season high total. Lawrence added 21 points and Quentin Millora-Brown 10, including a buzzer-beating 3 to close the first half.

Vanderbilt won without 7-footer Liam Robbins, who injured his lower right leg early in the game.

Stackhouse said Robbins would be evaluated.

Kentucky freshman guard Cason Wallace left the game early in the second half with a leg injury. Coach John Calipari said there was no swelling and hoped Wallace would be "OK" for Saturday's regular-season finale.

the Northwest Nationals in Kent, Washington (July 21-23) and the NHRA Nationals in Topeka, Kansas (Aug. 11-13) because of prior engagements.

He also is scheduled to compete in select regional races, beginning this week with the Baby Gators in Gainesville. The NHRA schedule, combined with NASCAR and SRX duties, have him feeling "like a Thanksgiving plate."

"I have covered every inch of surface that I can put anything else on," Stewart said.

He put sprint-car racing on hold, and while he had conversations about returning to NASCAR to run the dirt-track event at Bristol Motor Speedway, he shelved that, too.

"I'm just trying to be an average husband; I'm not even trying to set the bar too high," he said. "I just want to do the right things and have fun with my wife. … If Leah retired tomorrow, I would still be involved in the same capacity than I am right now.

"It has nothing to do with our relationship. She just helped set the hook on getting me addicted to an NHRA."

tough, trying to manage our emotions, while also trying to play the game. We're just not there yet, maturity-wise. But that's something that I'm trying to build."

Scottsburg (18-5) led 18-7 after the first quarter, then hit six 3-pointers in the second quarter to open up a 46-14 lead at the break. A basket by Kody Clancy to open the third pushed the margin over 35 and the Warriors led by as many as 39 (55-16) before cruising to the win.

After hitting 17 of the 22 shots it attempted in the first half — including 9-of-14 from 3-point range — Scottsburg cooled considerably in the second half but still ended up shooting 61% for the game. Nearly half of the Warriors' points (33) came from the 3-point line thanks to an 11-for-22 performance.

Madison shot 43% (15-for-35) from the floor, going just 3-of-13 on 3-pointers, but even more devastating for the Cubs were their 19 turnovers, 15 of which came in the first half. Scottsburg outscored the Cubs 33-7 off turnovers.

Reynolds led Madison with 14 points while Mason Davis scored eight and True had seven.

Clancy had 22 points, and Kyle McGinnis had 11 for Scottsburg. Former Madison Cub Jack Miller, now a junior at Scottsburg, scored four points.

Scottsburg advanced to the semifinals where it played Silver Creek (12-11), a 55-54 winner over Charlestown (11-12) in Wednesday's other game. The other semifinal will pit Salem (1-21) and Corydon (19-5), a 62-55 winner over North Harrison (9-12) on Tuesday.

Madison ends the season with a 4-20 record, the most losses the Cubs have had in a season in school history. But with the entire roster back, Stotts is looking forward to fielding a veteran team on the floor the next few years.

"Last year was kind of a throw together everything kind of year and then this year we got pretty much a brand new group. I definitely look at this season as kind of part one of a two or even three-part season," Stotts said. "The key to success is, can you stick together and can you all continue to grow? These next three or four months will tell what type of team we have. If we can get these guys to buy in and just keep doing what we've been doing, then we can be OK. This team has been pretty well connected and they want to play harder. They say they want to win and if they do and they trust me on this, I think we'll get back to where we need to be."

Today's Puzzle Solved

'Can you hear me now?' YES!

AMY DICKINSON
ASK AMY

Dear Amy: What words of advice would you have for addressing someone who is in a public place having a very public, loud, and personal phone conversation on their Bluetooth earbuds (or cellphones in general)?

I'm completely baffled as to why someone does this, but I see it all the time — in grocery stores, business offices — you name it.

No one wants to hear it, and it personally makes me feel awkward and uncomfortable. — KQ, in Kentucky

Dear KQ: I believe the reason people tend to yell into their cellphones while they are using earphones or earbuds is because they can't actually hear themselves very well … because their ears are plugged by their earbuds.

People tend to quickly believe that they are isolated when engaged in a private cellphone conversation — even in a public space.

Landlines (remember those?) have microphones in the earpiece so speakers can hear themselves. Cellphones don't seem to utilize this function as well.

The so-called "Lombard effect" describes the human tendency to raise our voice to match the noise around us, even when this is unnecessary.

Yes — this is annoying!

I'd like to augment this gripe by adding an additional annoyance: People who use FaceTime in public.

I understand that all grandparents find their grandchildren adorable and compelling but must they visit with these children over FaceTime at a crowded restaurant? And again with the yelling!

Free-ranging children stray too far

AMY DICKINSON
ASK AMY

Dear Amy: My brother has two daughters, ages four and six.

Pretty much ever since they could walk, my brother and his wife have given the girls free range at family events and parties, where they are allowed to go off by themselves for an hour or so.

The kids are very active and don't sit still for more than a couple minutes at a time. They will basically disappear upstairs, or go outside with other kids.

To me, this isn't safe. I'd be worried they could fall or have an accident.

During Thanksgiving, my 4-year-old niece was running on a deck near a pond by herself. My brother and his wife were still inside socializing. To child-free me, this is nuts!

Frankly, I think my brother and his wife are just lazy parents at times and let the kids do whatever they want.

Should I say something? What's your opinion of this parenting style? — Anonymous

Dear Anonymous: Even fairly strict and more attentive parents tend to let their kids "free range" when they're at family events, where there are lots of other adults and often older children around.

This definitely carries risks, because parents sometimes really "check out," or they assume that other adults have an eye on their children when they don't.

Also — at family events and parties, most children go just a little haywire.

My greater point is that unless you have spent time with this family in their home, accompanying them and their children throughout a fairly "normal" day, then you don't really know what kind of parents they are.

Overall, I think that "free range" parenting is great — and that letting children explore and try new things on their own helps them to develop judgment, self-confidence and resilience.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Your friendships can help keep you afloat even if work and duties threaten to sink your mood. Focus on important details when handling responsibilities and be respectful of others' experience in the matter.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Your affections can grow stronger when you find someone you can trust. Someone may prove their faithfulness in unexpected ways. You may accept an invitation where you will be treated like a member of the family.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — You may be thrown into contact with a hardworking individual who can uphold higher standards. You should know a good deal when you see one. You may find yourself browsing for the ideal addition to your home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — You may be in need of the counsel of loved ones for financial matters or business plans. It may be easier to absorb new information at this time. You might ride along with someone who knows where they are going.

ASTROLOGY

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You might attract favorable attention, but you may not return the feeling. A blind date may not turn out as well as expected. Try focusing on fulfilling your promises within existing relationships, both romantic and platonic.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Look inward for guidance but take inspiration from outside. You might become attracted to the glamour of the stage or the escapism of films. You could find yourself having daydreams filled with clues about what your aspirations could be in this world.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Take the lead by tackling constructive activities and do something good. You can flex your muscles by competing in a sport or using your extra energy to make headway with the work piled up on your desk.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — It isn't only the destination that matters; the journey is equally if not more important. There can be different recipes for success — find one that resonates with your soul and also does some good in the world.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — There may be someone who catches your eye and could have more in mind than a platonic relationship. You may need to set a boundary if this person tries to pry into your financial status or asks you for a loan.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You have the power to quash the competition and exceed expectations. Try not to get distracted by a charming person who has not proved themselves trustworthy, or by someone who brings out your worst.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Find a coworker who can work with you. Acting on your own could seem disagreeable, but you may be hindered by accepting help from the wrong workmate. Resist the possible urge to play hooky or leave early from your job.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Kick your ambitions up a notch. You may be content with what you already have and might need an incentive to work harder. You might want to buy the best while your family or housemates could want to cut corners or costs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You may be pleasantly surprised at the results when you trust that the universe will protect your interests. If you have business deals brewing, this might be an exciting time to put together profitable plans.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Your business abilities could be top tier, but that does not mean you cannot be deceived. You might want to avoid starting costly new projects or making investments unless you have thoroughly vetted the subject.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — You might want to apply best business practices to your own budget. Now may not be the optimal time to accept an IOU or borrow money. Work diligently to correct any mistakes brought to your attention.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — To achieve something, you may need to make a few mistakes. You can create something special even if it may cause some disruption. You may be wiser than usual about your finances and major purchases.

Notre Dame wins coach Brey's home finale, upsets Pitt

BY ANTHONY ANDERSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH BEND — Marcus Hammond and Cormac Ryan each scored 20 points as Notre Dame won longtime coach Mike Brey's final home game with an 88-81 victory over No. 25 Pittsburgh on Wednesday night.

Nate Laszewski and Trey Wertz each added 14 points as the Fighting Irish (11-19, 3-16 Atlantic Coast Conference) snapped a seven-game losing streak.

Brey, who is stepping down at season's end and received warm ovations from the crowd before and after the game, improved to 315-76 at Purcell Pavilion over 23 years as Notre Dame coach.

"What an unbelievable night," Brey said over the public address. "We defended pretty much the whole game. I thought we were good defensively. ... It was neat for our seniors to finish like that."

Jamarius Burton, Nelly Cummings and Nike Sibande all scored 19 points, and Blake Hinson added 15 points and 13 rebounds, for the Panthers (21-9, 14-5), who entered with wins in eight of their last nine games. Pitt was playing its first game since moving into the AP Top 25 for the first time in seven years.

"First and foremost, congrats to Notre Dame," Panther coach Jeff Capel said. "They were terrific. I knew they would come out and be really inspired and emotional (with five grad players in their starting lineup), and obviously being the last game here for Coach Brey."

Pitt, the conference leader going in, had a chance to clinch at least a tie for its first ACC title across its 10 years in the league, but struggled with its shooting.

The Panthers finished 7 of 22 on 3-pointers and 20 of 36 at the line, while the Irish closed 10 of 27 and 26 of 31. "There's a lot of things we didn't do well," Capel said, "but I love the fight that we had."

Notre Dame led by a high of 61-41 at 11:49 remaining, after scoring the final 11 points of the first half for a 42-28 advantage at the break. Late-rallying Pitt got no closer than 84-79 at 38 seconds remaining.

BIG PICTURE

Pittsburgh: While the Panthers appear safely into the NCAA Tournament field, their 2-2 mark over their last four games while facing entirely sub-.500 ACC teams won't help their seeding.

Notre Dame: While the win was sweet for the Irish, barring a miracle title in next week's ACC Tournament and thus the league's automatic NCAA Tourney bid, they'll be turning their full attention toward hiring Brey's successor.

Davis falls short in bid to break Maravich's scoring mark

BY TOM WITHERS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio — Antoine Davis outscored them all — except for "Pistol" Pete.

Detroit Mercy's star guard finished four points shy of surpassing Pete Maravich as the NCAA career scoring leader on Thursday night, scoring 22 in a gritty 71-66 loss to Youngstown State in the Horizon League tournament.

Davis came in needing 26 points to break Maravich's hallowed mark of 3,667 points that stood for over 50 years. But after picking up his fourth foul with 3:36 left, the slender 6-foot-1 guard, who was trapped and double-teamed for much of his 38 minutes by the top-seeded Penguins, couldn't drive as effectively to the basket.

With Maravich's record still within reach, Davis missed four 3-pointers — one of them a wide-open look — in the final two minutes of an intense game.

While disappointed with the loss and falling short of Maravich, Davis felt pride afterward.

"It's really special," he said, leaning against a wall outside Detroit Mercy's locker room. "Maybe in 20 or 25 years somebody is going to be doing the same thing that I did, chase that record, maybe even sooner than that.

"It's just a special feeling. I don't take any of this for granted at all. I'm thankful for this. Blessed. I still feel like I'm the best scorer of my generation. Nobody can take that from me."

After the final buzzer, tempers briefly flared after Youngtown State's Dwyane Cohill, who had guarded Davis for much of the game, appeared to say something to the two-time conference player of the year.

Davis then had to be restrained as debris was thrown at him from the student section inside Beeghly Center.

Unless Detroit Mercy gets an unlikely postseason bid, Davis finishes with 3,664 points in five seasons. Maravich amassed his record in just three years while playing for his dad, Press, and he did it before there was a 3-point line or shot clock.

Davis would welcome another shot at history.

"I would love to play in the CBI, NIT, something," he said. "Not even for the record, just to go out on a better note."

From the outset, it was obvious Youngstown State was determined not to let Davis break the record on its floor. The Penguins ran double teams and trapped Davis, who was held to 15 points earlier this season in a loss to YSU.

"That's the respect I deserve," he said. "I'm the best scorer in the league, so I don't look at it as unfair or anything like that."

Wearing a protective mask to protect a broken nose sustained earlier this season at Cincinnati, Davis started slowly in front of a sellout crowd and missed his first four shots before dropping an off-balance jumper from the top of the key.

MLB's new rules to speed up games get mixed reception

BY ALANIS THAMES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — It took 2 hours, 19 minutes for the Miami Marlins to beat the Houston Astros 4-3 in a spring training game Monday — a game so fast that Ryan Murphy, a lifelong Houston fan, found himself lingering in the ballpark for a while afterward.

"I'm a baseball fan," said Murphy, wearing 2022 Astros World Series gear, "so if I stay here for four hours, for two hours, it doesn't matter to me."

Faced with criticism of dwindling cultural relevance and a laggardly product compared to other major sports, Major League Baseball introduced a set of new rules this year to speed up games and attract younger fans.

The bases are bigger to improve player safety and may also encourage more aggressive baserunning. Pitchers can only disengage from the pitching rubber twice per plate appearance. And there's a new pitch clock that gives players 30 seconds to resume play between batters. Between pitches, pitchers have 15 seconds with nobody on and 20 seconds if there is a baserunner.

Less than a week into the spring training exhibition schedule, MLB seems to be getting what it wants, shaving about 20 minutes off the average length of games compared to last spring.

Players have been mostly pleased with the rollout.

"The game feels more exciting," Washington Nationals left-hander Patrick Corbin said. "Even some of the high-scoring games are under three hours."

Fans seeing the new-look sport for the first time this week have had mixed reviews. Some, like Murphy, are indifferent to the changes.

"It's irrelevant to us as fans, honestly," said Murphy, who traveled from Utah to West Palm Beach for Houston's exhibition season. "Players might think something different of it, but for us it's all the same.

"How would I know the bases are bigger, honestly? I mean, we see a pitch clock out here, and we know it's there, but it doesn't matter to me."

Some fans like the idea of being in and out of a game in under three hours, which is about how long an average nine-inning baseball game lasted in 2022.

Others feel a nostalgic pull to how the sport has always been.

"I'm not a big fan of the pitch count," said Mark Mezzatesta, who traveled to Florida from Queens in New York. "I feel like that's rushing the game. I feel it was fine the way it was. Pitchers do take a while. And batters do take a while, too. Fifteen seconds with nobody on base and 20 seconds with somebody on base is too short."

Barbara Schiffman of Roseland, New Jersey, said she's OK with some of the rules but "they should never let a game end on either the pitch clock or the batter clock."

She was referring to a recent game between Atlanta and Boston that ended in a tie after Braves prospect Cal Conley was assessed an automatic strike for a pitch clock violation.

Conley originally thought he'd won the game with a two-out, bases-loaded walk but instead was given an at-bat-ending strike after the umpire said he wasn't set in the box as the clock wound under 8 seconds.

"When you get to that point in the game," Schiffman said, "you've got to let the game play out without the clock. That would be my only concern."

She also had a complaint about new limits on pitcher disengagements from the rubber. Pitchers can only attempt to pick off a runner twice — if they try a third pickoff and are unsuccessful, the runner gets to advance a base.

No umps for Orioles, Pirates unneeded bottom of 9th play

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRADENTON, Fla. — There was no umpire behind the plate calling balls and strikes, or even one of those so-called robo umps that could become part of the game in the future, when the Baltimore Orioles and Pittsburgh Pirates kept playing Tuesday.

The umpires were done with their day's work after Baltimore's Josh Lester grounded out to end the top of the ninth inning with the Orioles trailing 7-4, officially ending the spring training contest.

But after the umps left the field, the teams kept going and played the bottom of the ninth following a quick discussion between Pirates manager Derek Shelton and Baltimore skipper Brandon Hyde had a quick discussion and decided to keep going.

The Orioles wanted to get some work on the mound for right-hander Ofreidy Gómez. Teams occasionally agree to shorten or lengthen spring training games depending on needs.

With the umpires gone, the balls and strikes were called by the catcher, just like is done in so many backyard games. Maverick Handley, a non-roster invitee who has never played about the Double-A level, was behind the plate for the Orioles.

Under Major League Baseball protocol, umpires in spring training aren't obligated to proceed to the bottom of the ninth after a game has been played to a finish — the possibility of a needless injury, perhaps on a foul tip striking the plate ump, is among the concerns.

It has happened that umpires have permitted play to continue and kept working, but they aren't required to allow it. Such situations are subject to discussion and agreement among all sides.

Spurs edge Pacers 110-99 as Pop misses game with illness

BY RAUL DOMINGUEZ
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio Spurs have lived by a next-man up mantra all season and it extended to their bench Thursday night.

With San Antonio coach Gregg Popovich out due to an illness, Jeremy Sochan had 22 points and 13 rebounds for his first career double-double and the Spurs defeated the Indiana Pacers 110-99.

"They're probably trying to follow Pop's leadership, even though he isn't here," said San Antonio assistant Mitch Johnson, who coached in Popovich's absence. "They know what he would be saying."

The Spurs have won two straight after dropping a franchise-record 16 in a row.

Devin Vassell scored 18 points for San Antonio in his return after missing 25 games following arthroscopic surgery on his left knee. He shot 8 for 15 in his first game since Jan. 2.

Popovich and lead assistant Brett Brown were out with non-COVID-19 illnesses. Popovich is expected to return for Saturday's home game against Houston.

Johnson collected his first victory in his second game helming the Spurs. He served as head coach in a 140-103 loss to Phoenix on on May 15, 2021, when Popovich missed the game to attend Tim Duncan's Hall of Fame induction.

"Coach did a great job," Sochan said. "He helped us a lot."

Screams of celebration echoed in the hallways outside the Spurs locker room as the players showered Johnson with bottles of cold water.

"I'll be honest, it was fun." Johnson said. "It was fun. This is basketball. This is what I enjoy doing. There is nothing that I did differently or tried to change. We have a program and Pop sets the tone from the top to bottom. It goes from him to the players and everybody else."

That was apparent by the team's focus on defense.

San Antonio, which is allowing 122.4 points per game, has held opponents below 100 points in consecutive games.

"I think it's just staying together and taking pride in it," Sochan said. "There were times we lacked focus or will. Recently, we've been trying to impose our will on that side of the court."

Buddy Hield had 27 points to lead the Pacers and Chris Duarte had 18. The Pacers committed 14 turnovers while shooting 46% from the field.

"We had a lot of guys that struggled tonight," Indiana coach Rick Carlisle said. "Those things can happen. We've got to move on."

The Spurs are a much different team than the one that last played at the AT&T Center on Feb. 3 before embarking on their annual Rodeo Road Trip.

Jakob Poeltl and Josh Richardson were traded, Stanley Johnson was released, and injuries continue to pile up. Keldon Johnson, Romeo Langford, Khem Birch and Isaiah Roby all missed this game and Doug McDermott did not return after spraining his right thumb in the second quarter.

Despite all that upheaval, San Antonio found a way to beat an Indiana team that had won two straight and three of four.

Devonte' Graham and Zach Collins also had 18 points each for the Spurs in a balanced scoring effort.

The Spurs opened the third quarter on an 11-0 run to take a 63-54 lead. San Antonio led by 17 in the fourth quarter.

TIP-INS

Pacers: Indiana had won six straight in San Antonio since its previous defeat on March 1, 2017. … Former Spurs guard George Hill received a loud ovation when he was announced in the starting lineup.

Spurs: San Antonio honored former owner Red McCombs prior to the game. McCombs died Feb. 19 after a lengthy illness. He was part of the original ownership group that brought the then-ABA franchise to San Antonio from Dallas. The Spurs will wear a red patch with McCombs' initials on the left strap of their jerseys in tribute. … The Spurs are 4-23 in 2023, including the 16-game losing streak.

TURNAROUND

Duarte had 18 points after failing to score in double figures in nine of his last 10 games. He was 8 for 14 from the field and 2 for 3 on 3-pointers.
